Walking in a Winter Wonderland

You don't need to be perfectly poised to enjoy the snowy outdoors
By Samantha Wohlfelt

Spokane's Parks Department hosts dozens of snowshoeing events each year.

Sure, people who are good at balance like to spend their winters gracefully gliding down mountain sides on one or two polished pieces of wood, but what about those with a little less coordination?

Snowshoes might just be the solution for folks less interested in a mad adrenaline rush, and more interested in enjoying some fresh powder, cool air and maybe even a glass of wine.

Every winter, through March, the city of Spokane parks department puts on dozens of guided snowshoeing adventures throughout the area with snowshoes, trekking poles and transportation all included in the price.
