The "box" has been used as an overt discriminatory tool to further margialize/disqualify people we dislike. It is an unfair practice. The purpose to "Ban the box" is simply to get rid of it and make it non-existant on applications for rental/lease contracts, Employment/training opps and Educational opportunities. 	Transforming public opinion on how we use Jails and prisons	The majority of people in jail are presumed innocent. Most are there for nonviolent offenses. Many are simply too poor to post bail. Our overuse of jails carries significant costs—to individuals, families, communities, and society at large. We need solutions to start where incarceration starts: in our nation’s jails.			The primary purpose of jails is to detain those awaiting trial who are a danger to public safety or a flight risk. Jailing someone who is neither results in huge costs for families and communities, including lost income, parents separated from their children, untreated mental health and substance abuse problems, a greater risk of re-offending, and wasted taxpayer dollars. Briefing Paper: SHRC Suicide Means Prevention Task Force
POC: Commissioner Lemus 509.720.9203 JLemus@spokanecity.org

Commissioners as you know for the past three years working on suicide means prevention in our city has been a priority of mine. Over the last few years we have all heard in the news and through family and friends of increased suicides in our city. I have mainly been focusing on the Monroe Street bridge as it has been a major hotspot for suicide attempts in our city however I would like us to focus on a citywide suicide means prevention strategy. I have attached some data from SPD that shows that there is need to start looking at how best to address this issue. It's apparent that a city wide suicide means prevention strategy is needed.

What I am proposing is that we create under the SHRC the suicide means prevention task force. This task force will consist of Local Mental Health Officials, City First Responders, City staff from the following departments CHHS, Public Works (possible bridge mods) Community Mental Health advocates and Community Mental Health organizations. I have outlined what I see the composition of this group looking like on the second page of this briefing paper.

The intent of this task force would be over the course of 2018 to make recommendations to the city administration through a white paper on how best to implement a suicide means prevention strategy within the city and also possible areas for a ask to the legislature for the recommendations in 2019.

Monroe Street Bridge Barrier Proposal

The Problem

According to data from the Spokane Police Department, they have received 210 calls involving attempted or completed suicides on the Monroe Street Bridge from 2005 to 2015; with six calls categorized as “dead on arrival.” This translates to at least 20 suicide related calls every year for the last ten years.

Suicide Means Restriction

While underlying mental health issues risk factors can heighten the risk of suicide, research has found that suicide is often an impulsive act that occurs at the height of personal crises. One study (Simon 2005) that interviewed survivors of near-fatal suicide attempts found that one in four of those surveyed deliberated for less than five minutes; and nine out of ten deliberated less than a day. This confirms the findings of other studies (Williams 1980; Peterson 1985; Eddelston 2006; & Deisenhammer 2009) and is one of the reasons why public health officials recommend “suicide means restriction” (restricting access to lethal means of suicide) as one of the strategies communities should use to address suicide.

Data from the CDC and studies on case fatality rates confirm that the method of suicide can mean the difference between life and death. Spicer and Miller (2000) studied suicide incidents in eight states and found that while drug/poison ingestion and cutting/piercing accounted for most suicide attempts (85% combined), they were the least lethal methods (1.5% and 1.2% case fatality rates respectively).¹ In contrast, firearms, suffocation and jumping were much more lethal. The chart below shows the percent of fatal suicides as a proportion of total completion and attempts for a given method in 2013.²

Method	Fatalities	Nonfatal Attempts	Total	% Fatal (Fatality Rate)
Cut/Pierce	783	109,862	110,645	0.7%
Poisoning	6,637	260,175	266,812	2.5%
Fire/Burn	173	2,006	2,179	7.9%
Transport Related	191	2,537	2,728	7%
Falls	976	3,931	4,907	19.9%

Bridge Barriers

The majority of studies done on the installation of bridge barriers, physical barriers that remove the ability of people to jump off of them, reduce the number of suicide attempts. These studies also find that there is no evidence of a “substitution effect” after installation of barriers, where people simply move to another bridge.³ Beautrais (2001) studied the removal of a physical barrier on a bridge in Australia that had been in place for nearly six decades. Comparing the four year prior to removal with four years post removal, Beautrais found that suicide increased fivefold.⁴ When barriers were re-installed, Beautrais (2009) found that there were no suicides in the four years following re-installation.⁵

² Data via NCHS Vital System Statistics and NEISS All Injury Program (Centers for Disease Control WISQARS Website); 2013. Sampling for suicide related firearm injuries for the year of 2013 was unstable and thus not usable, but the fatality rate for firearm suicides is usually above 80%. Addressing firearm related suicides is a must, but cannot be done on a local level due to the Washington State Constitution, which pre-empts localities from being able to regulate firearms outside of a very specific, narrow set of circumstances.

Bennewith et al (2007) found that the installation of safety barriers on the Clifton suspension bridge in England resulted in the halving of suicides at the site (8.2 per year to 4 per year) and there was no increase in suicides at other bridges nearby.⁶ O’Carroll and Silverman (1994) found that the installation of safety barriers on the Ellington Bridge in Washington DC resulted in a 50% reduction of in suicide by jumping.⁷ Pelletier (2007) studied the installation of safety barriers on the Memorial Bridge in Augusta, Maine. The author found that after installation, no suicides took place at the bridge and other bridges in the city did not experience in an increase in suicide attempts.⁸

Proposal

The City of Spokane Human Rights Commission should work with Spokane Regional Health District (including the Youth Suicide Prevention Program), the Spokane Arts Commission, the Spokane Historic Landmarks Commission and the City of Spokane to create an artistic, physical barrier on the Monroe Street Bridge to prevent its continued use as a “suicide bridge.” Needs for the project will include, but are not limited to:

- Education about the importance of means restriction and current research literature on the efficacy of bridge barriers.
- Securing support and collaboration from key departments in the City of Spokane.
- Scoping the project to estimate costs and identifying potential sources for funding.
- Collaborating on the creation of a Request for Proposals (RFP) to solicit project ideas.
- Establishing a process for design selection and project completion.

³ Only one study by Sinyor and Levitt (2010) found evidence of a substitution effect. Their study focused on the installation of the “Luminous Veil” barrier on the Blood Street Viaduct in Toronto, Canada. The reasons for the substitution effect are not explored at length in the study, but potential factors could include expected lethality of jumps off of other bridges (height), general use (high use bridges) and media coverage of jumps at other sites that encourage imitation.
