Who is a household?

All related or unrelated individuals—including children, disabled, and elderly dependents—residing in the same dwelling on a full-time basis. For example, two unrelated persons rent a 2-bedroom unit, and though they file taxes separately, they are a household because they share the same dwelling full-time. Similarly, a wife and husband, their two children, and the husband's sister all share the same dwelling, and are therefore a household even if the sister files taxes on her own and is not a financial dependent of the married couple.

What is included in income?

All monies the household receives and uses to pay monthly household expenses, such as business income, unemployment, social security, rental assistance, investments, retirement, dependent support, financial aid, gifts, grants, stipends, and student aid and loans.
